

Patrick Duff, MD

Additional Background

Dr. Duff grew up on Cape Cod and received his undergraduate degree in biology from Emmanuel College in Boston. Dr. Duff worked in immunology research at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston before pursuing medicine. While in Boston, he met his wife, a native Vermonter, before moving to New York for medical school. Dr. Duff received his medical degree from New York Medical College. He jumped at the opportunity to return to beautiful Vermont with his wife, who is a physician assistant, and completed his pediatric residency at UVM Children's Hospital. Dr. Duff enjoys caring for children of all ages, and has particular interests in pulmonology, allergy, and adolescent medicine. He enjoys spending time at home with his wife, daughter, dog and two cats. He also enjoys cooking, hiking, and kayaking. Now that he's a Vermonter, he plans to learn to ski. Dr. Duff will begin seeing patients at Timber Lane in July 2021.
